CAYMAN COPE WITH THE SARGASSUM SCOURGE

By Staff Writer

In Cayman, it appears that we'll just have to learn to live with the yearly sargassum scourge.

Once again, huge swathes of the pesky seaweed are clogging up the beaches emitting a putrid stench when it rots.

Although smelly, Chief Medical Officer Dr. Nick Gent says sargassum does not represent a significant risk to human health.

"When sargassum mats become stranded on the shoreline they will decompose. Like all decomposing biomass, it will produce gasses, such as hydrogen sulfide, which can have an unpleasant smell, even producing feelings of nausea. However, being outdoors, such gasses usually disperse rapidly and do not cause injury or illness," he said.

A Cayman Islands Government (CIG) advisory states that in unusual circumstances where these gasses may not disperse quickly, low residual concentrations of hydrogen sulfide can cause irritation to the eyes, nose, and throat. As degrading Sargassum may contain a complex mix of irritants, direct contact may cause skin rashes and it is recommended that people working to clear such materials use appropriate workwear and wash their hands after contact.

Currently, authorities here are monitoring what's known as 'the Great Atlantic Sargassum Belt', a patch of seaweed stretching more than 5,000 miles and estimated to weigh more than 10 million tonnes which is currently drifting through the Caribbean Sea towards the Gulf of Mexico.

The Department of Environment (DoE) and Cayman Islands National Weather Service (CINWS) have access to regional Sargassum forecasting and tracking systems, including NOAA's predictive Sargassum model.

However, officials say it remains difficult to predict local stranding events before they occur. A combination of interrelated factors, including prevailing winds and complicated nearshore currents, contribute to whether floating Sargassum lands on local shores.

Ministry of Sustainability & Climate Resiliency Chief Officer Jennifer Ahearn says

► Sargassum season starts in South Sound

the high levels of Sargassum in the Caribbean Sea this year increase the likelihood of the Cayman Islands being impacted in 2023.

"The Cayman Islands is one of many countries increasingly impacted by large Sargassum blooms over the past decade. These influxes of Sargassum are driven by external factors such as climate change and increases in nutrients from terrestrial deforestation and represent an emerging, long-term issue that governments, scientists and private sector organisations across the Caribbean region are all working to address."

According to Ms Ahearn, "At this time, there is no 'one size fits all' solution to Sargassum. Each large-scale beaching event is different and responses – whether led by the public or private sector – will need to take these unique circumstances into account to ensure our interventions do not cause unintentional, negative impacts on local habitats and species."

Sargassum is a natural part of the ocean ecosystem and healthy patches of this floating seaweed can serve as important habitats for fish, crabs, shrimp, turtles and birds. In smaller quantities, Sargassum that washes up on shore is naturally washed away or buried by wave action, nourishing the beach and stabilising the shoreline.

A task force was previously established under the Ministry of Planning, Agriculture, Housing and Infrastructure to tackle large-scale sargassum influxes affecting public beaches and boat ramps.

The Ministry of Sustainability & Climate Resiliency, working in collaboration with the DoE, Cayman Islands National Weather Service, Hazard Management Cayman Islands among other agencies, says it is producing a holistic framework to quickly coordinate a national response in the event of Sargassum stranding incidents.

"The Government continues to actively monitor the Sargassum blooms and is prepared to act upon stranding incidents as we have in the past, whether through clean-ups of public beaches and boat ramps led by the Public Works Department or using new techniques like we did in response to the North Sound stranding event last year. The national response framework will serve to formalise existing roles and responsibilities, and clarify thresholds for mobilising certain agencies," Ahearn said.

Last year, in response to an unusual stranding event which affected the North Sound in Grand Cayman, the Cayman Islands Government trialled an initiative to pump the Sargassum out of the water and transport the seaweed to the George Town Landfill.

The trial removed more than 2,880 square feet of seaweed before it became too degraded, and the teams on the ground learned a lot about the parameters for success using this method.

According to the DoE, whether this methodology is used again will depend on the unique circumstances of the incident, and the potential impacts on the Cayman Islands natural environment, communities and tourism product.

The department has developed informational materials and a seaweed removal enquiry form to help landowners determine when action is needed to address stranded sargassum and when it is best to let nature take its course.

It advises that special precautions should also be taken during turtle nesting season. In larger quantities, sargassum strandings can reduce water oxygen levels and light penetration with the potential to negatively affect marine life, and cause a nuisance to residents and visitors.

partment, include dredging works at the existing dock and the new dock location as well as construction of a new dock and repairs to the existing fish hut.

Ministry of Planning, Agriculture, Housing and Infrastructure Hon. Jay Ebanks said the existing dock was critically in need of repairs and upgrade for over 15 years. "The people of North Side have been engaged and the fishermen have given their support. The Government has been committed to moving this project forward and I am pleased that the changes will allow for small boats to safely launch and utilise the dock area for fishing and other watersport activities", he said.

He further noted, "The construction of the new dock and fishing hut will enable marine vessels safe access and moving from the seaside to the dock and also from the dock to the seaside without damage to vessels due to existing marine conditions".

Project managers Public Works Department have emphasised that all the necessary permits have been received from the relevant agencies of Government and notices to proceed issued by the Department of Environment.

The contract for the project was executed between the Ministry of Planning, Agriculture, Housing and Infrastructure and contractor Robson Construction end of last year.

The Public Works Department is advising members of the public that the area is an active construction zone and restricted to employees of the contractor, Department of Environment and Public Works Department.

Work has commenced on the new Old Man Bay Dock in North Side and is forecast to be completed by August 2023.

Caymanian Times celebrates 10 years Launches new talk show

'Cayman Conversations' is the latest venture from the publisher behind the Caymanian Times Newspaper, adding to the media offerings of the news outlet.

The launch of the new talk show, which will take place on Monday, 3 April at 12pm on BOBO 89.1 FM and coincides with the ten-year anniversary of the paper, which will be celebrated during the month of April.

The first Cayman Conversations talk show and discussion, will feature Caymanian Times' Editor-in-Chief and Publisher, Mr. Ralph Lewis, who was interviewed by Reporter/Writer, Mr. Stuart Wilson, who also serves as a staff-writer for the Caymanian Times.

Mr. Lewis explained the reason for the new spinoff and why it was important to have a forum to discuss the topics happening in the community and featured in the paper.

"I saw the need the need to grow the platform not only in print but also on the radio, online and other facets, the idea is to use multiple outlets," said Mr. Lewis, who explained that the new talk show would be airing, Monday through Thursday and will be presented at 12pm till 2pm on Bobo FM.

During the interview several topics will be discussed, including how the Caymanian

► Mr. Ralph Lewis

Times newspaper started and some of the highlights of the publication along the way.

"We started out as a publication that is upbeat and focused on examining the region in relation to what was happening here in the Cayman Islands.

"There have been many highlights along the way, including the passing of Fidel Castro, which happened during a trip I took to Cuba to learn more about the tourism industry there, as there was a lot of run-off in the market, with more tourists visiting Cuba and I wanted to see how we could duplicate this success in the Cayman Islands," said Mr. Lewis.

He added that as a Caymanian, and someone who had made the Cayman Islands his home, it is important for him to contribute to the Islands' society in meaningful ways.

A part of this was giving back to the community with a service that allowed persons to source Jobs, which was the impetus behind the genesis of the Caymanian Times, as the paper was originally meant to be an advertising tool for employers and job seekers.

Upon the initial publication of the Caymanian Times, Mr. Lewis said there were some challenges, including the setback of having his first application for license, denied.

During the period of time, he was waiting for the license to create a job seekers publication, he decided to go fully into publishing a newspaper.

The paper was first called Caymanian Weekly. It started out looking at all the issues of the day, including immigration, education, finance and politics.

Prior to Covid-19, the Caymanian Times was publishing the paper, five days per week and is now revamping back to its original frequency.

Incidentally, the pandemic was also a focal point for the paper's profile.

Mr. Lewis explained why it was an important time to launch the talk show at this juncture:

"We want to have more of a live presence and piggy-back off the goodwill and profile that was established during the pandemic and through the years of publishing the paper," said Mr. Lewis.

"Readers of the newspaper will now be able to hear a live discussion that takes a deeper look into the news, with guests ranging from politicians to musicians and other notable representatives in the community," he added.

"We want to have a focus on the arts and the local music is very important to us, we want to explore all areas of life in Cayman and give a platform for the community to engage in meaningful discussion," said Mr. Lewis.

The Caymanian Times now publishes two days per week and will start ramping up to three days per week, once flights return normally, according to Mr. Lewis.

Look out for Cayman Conversations on your local radio dial on BOBO 98.1 FM, Monday - Friday from 12pm to 2pm.

THE SAUNDERS SAGA: WAS HE SACKED OR DID HE QUIT?

By Staff Writer

SACKED:

Hon. Premier Wayne Panton this week said he sacked his deputy Chris Saunders after giving his former second-in-command of the PACT coalition the opportunity to resign.

Appearing Monday on the Radio Cayman programme For the Record with Orrett Connor, Mr Panton said it had not been an easy decision to make and he tried to make a fair decision and had offered Mr Saunders the opportunity to resign.

"He did not accept the opportunity to resign at that time," the Premier said.

The Premier said thereafter he had to exercise his authority to advise the Governor to revoke the appointment of the Deputy Premier and Minister for Finance, Economic Development, Border Control and Labour.

QUIT:

But that assertion by Premier Panton directly contradicts what his former Deputy Premier and Minister of Finance, Economic Affairs and Labour claimed in a statement he issued on March 21st.

In a message to his supporters and the wider Cayman public, Mr Saunders said he split from the coalition PACT administration (People-driven, Accountable, Competent and Transparent) over differences with Premier Panton.

"Earlier today, I held a brief meeting with Premier Panton. It is clear from that meeting that the Premier and I have differences that are material to us working together, and as such, I have resigned as a Minister of Cabinet and a member of PACT effective immediately."

MIXED MESSAGES:

Not so according to Premier Panton who himself put out a press release and held a no-questions-allowed press conference on the day his ex-deputy claimed it was he who had quit the government.

That release from the Office of the Premier, released shortly Mr Saunders disclosed that he and PACT had parted ways, spoke of creating "better synergies".

It only vaguely referred to what might have prompted Mr Saunders's departure while highlighting a Cabinet reshuffle.

"Today, Premier Hon. Wayne Panton announced several changes to the Ministers of Cabinet in order to create better synergies and improve delivery of results in the PACT Government's stated priority areas...Over the past weeks, the Premier has been carefully evaluating the PACT Government's performance over the first two years."

A subsequent 'press conference' where no questions were taken saw the Premier repeating the contents of the earlier-issued press release but not going into the details he disclosed in his appearance on For The Record a week later.

CONCERNS OVER CONDUCT:

In a surprise disclosure, Mr Panton said the reason for Mr Saunders' departure was over issues of conduct.

"People should be able to live and work without being harassed and berated, and not have to put up with "unwelcome approaches", Premier Panton said, suggesting that was the behaviour Mr Saunders had displayed and which had given rise to his departure.

The Premier said that not only was it up to Government to ensure that people could live and work in an environment free from such behaviour, but they had to also ensure that identities were protected in case of future retribution, something he had to honour and respect.

NO RIFT WITH GOVERNOR FOR SPLIT:

Another issue which has circulated surrounding Mr Saunders' departure from the PACT coalition was supposedly over a dispute with the outgoing Governor Martyn Roper, a claim denied by both the Governor and the Premier.

Mr Panton said the rumour by the media house that there had been a disagreement between the Governor and Mr Saunders which culminated in Mr Saunders' removal, but that was not the case at all.

ANOTHER TWIST TO THE MIX:

But the 'was-he-pushed-or-did-he-jump debate rumbles on.

Following the Premier's contention on Monday morning that Mr Saunders was sacked over issues including harassment, poor conduct and "unwelcome approaches", the former deputy premier put out a counter statement shortly after.

"I am not going to leave you in suspense any further to wonder what is really going on and where there were material differences between Premier Panton and me," Mr Saunders said.

According to him, the first major difference is the Integrated Solid Waste Management System otherwise known as ISWMS, or the Dump Project.

"If you want the truth to what is really going on, I implore you to ask the Hon. Premier, Wayne Panton, to release the report from the Office of the Auditor General on the Regen project. For ease of reference, the report was sent to the Hon. Premier on Saturday the 4th of December 2021 at 12:30pm by the Auditor General."

The former deputy premier and minister of finance claimed: "If the report is released to the public, you will know the truth and everything will be made clear to you. If the report is not released, I suspect that as usual the excuse will be "Commercial Sensitivity" If that happens, I would suggest that the Premier be asked the nature of the Commercial Sensitivity and whose Commercial interest is being protected over and above the public's interest."

As things stand, we might not have heard the last of this, the half of it, and are yet to see the impact of it.

Girls Softball – Game Report

► Digicel - Tracey - March 16th

► Logic - McKenna - March 11th

► Coldwell vs Kirk Freeport - 3 - Mar 25th

March 23rd Logic 19, Digicel 17

The 2023 season of CILLA Girls Softball continued on March 23rd as fourth place Logic built a 19-2 lead, then withstood a furious final inning rally by first place Digicel to hold on for an amazing 19-17 win!

Logic scored at least four runs in each inning during their most explosive offensive output of the year. Avah Connors scored four runs, while Lili Anne Aleria crossed the plate three times. Teammates Hristina Nachev, Lorlie Bryan, Carmela Ylagan, Deidre Edwards and Natalia Cugliari each scored twice during the balanced attack. Carmela had 5 RBIs on the night, Lorlie had 3 RBIs, and Keirsten McLaughlin and Hristina each chipped in with 2 RBIs. Outfielder Jeliyah McLaughlin made several good plays in left centre, including a fine catch.

Digicel only managed two runs over the first four innings, but they erupted for 15 runs in the top of the 5th. Rio Windsor scored four times, while Coco Windsor, Tracey Campbell, Renee Bryan, and Leianni Dixon each scored twice. Rio had a solo homerun to left centre in the 1st, while Eve McIntosh blasted a three-run homer deep to centre in the dramatic 5th inning.

Digicel's first seven batters scored in the 5th, and after one out, another seven batters crossed the plate before two were out. Logic missed good chances to get two outs earlier in the inning and Digicel took advantage of every opportunity. Fortunately for Logic, they were able to keep their composure at the very end to get the elusive final two outs, which allowed them to hold on for the victory.

It certainly was a hard-earned first win of the season for Logic, who have come so close several times this year. It also narrowed the gap in the standings, as all four teams are within three games of one another with half the regular season to go.

Scoring by inning:

TEAM	1st	2nd	3rd	4rd	5rd	TOTAL
Digicel	1	0	1	0	15	17
Logic	6	4	4	5	-	19

March 25th Coldwell Banker 10, Kirk Freeport 5

The Saturday evening game saw Coldwell Banker win their third consecutive game with a 10-5 triumph over Kirk Freeport.

Kirk Freeport got off to a quick start, as their first four batters all reached and scored. Madison Malice, Demae Lee and Kenia Rostran all walked, while Nelly Hayles smashed an RBI double. Daniella Heard knocked in a run with a groundout. Coldwell Banker bounced back with five runs of their own in the bottom of the 1st, to make it 5-4. Janey Veilleux, Maya Willis and Jialy Archbold McLaughlin all walked and scored, while Raegan Jefferson scored after she hit an RBI single, and Eowyn Hawkins scored after her 2 RBI single.

Kirk Freeport failed to score in the 2nd as Jialy struck out the side. Coldwell Banker kept up the momentum by scoring five more runs in the bottom of the inning. RaMiyah Ebanks walked, Janey was hit in the arm by a pitch, and Maya reached after a dropped third strike. All three would score as Raegan smacked a 2 RBI single and Jialy belted a 2 RBI homer to centre.

Kirk Freeport scored a loan run in the 3rd as Kenia walked and eventually sprinted home from 3rd on a passed ball. Coldwell Banker was unable to score in the bottom of the inning as Demae caught a line drive and threw to Nelly for a good double play.

Kirk Freeport had one final chance, but Jialy alertly tagged out a runner who had strayed off second and she struck out the final batter to end the game, her seventh strikeout of the night.

Nelly, Jialy and Raegan were all presented with game balls for their excellent performances.

Games take place on Thursdays and Saturdays at 6:45 pm on Field 1 at the Field of Dreams, but the girls are on a two week Easter Break after this Saturday's game.

Scoring by inning:

TEAM	1st	2nd	3rd	4rd	TOTAL
